

Restoring the Moral Compass

Wealth, humanity and the pursuit of a wholesome life

LANCE J CHRISTIE

A DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES / 2026

The measure of greatness

The greatness of a society should not be measured solely by the wealth it accumulates, but by the moral principles it upholds, the freedom it affords its citizens and the quality of life it enables them to enjoy.

Money is an essential servant but a destructive master.

When society loses its compass

When commercial interests override conscience, when institutional loyalty overrides truth, and when the preservation of wealth and power takes precedence over human welfare, society loses its moral compass.

History demonstrates that deeply entrenched systems can be transformed when people of conscience unite around truth, justice and moral conviction.

The courage to change

The campaign against slavery demonstrated that commercial profitability could never justify the denial of human dignity.

Our generation faces its own moral challenges. We must have the courage to examine them, the integrity to establish the truth and the determination to pursue constructive change.

Our purpose is restoration

Our purpose is not destruction but restoration; not vengeance but accountability; not the condemnation of humanity but its enrichment.

Through education, responsible democracy, moral leadership, Christian principles and a balanced approach to life, we seek to encourage a society in which wealth serves humanity rather than humanity serving wealth.
Christ came into the world that the world through Him might be saved.

That remains the inspiration for this undertaking.

One vision. Six complementary initiatives.
